Introduction
Conveying messages through communication activities can be found in a literary work, for example a novel. Nurgiyantoro (1995: 310) explains that a fictional text is generally developed in two forms of narrative, namely narration and dialogue. The two forms are present alternately so that the story displayed is not monotonous, feels varied, and fresh. The novel contains a lot of conversations can be analyzed speech acts. This research will discuss speech acts contained in literary works with a pragmatic approach. Searle (1968: 15) classifies illocutionary speech acts into five forms of speech, each of which has a communicative function, namely assertive, directive, expressive, commissive and declarative speech.

Searle (1968: 15-16) states that expressive speech acts are part of illocutionary speech acts. Expressive speech acts are speech acts meant by the speaker so that the speech can be interpreted as an evaluation of the things mentioned in the speech and has several functions in it.

Some previous studies on expressive speech that have been done by previous research, Rahayu (2012) conducted a research entitled "Form and Function of Expressive Speech in French", Susmiati, Andianto, Husniah (2013) conducted a study entitled "Teacher Expressive Speech Acts Against Students in Indonesian Language Learning Class VIII State Junior High School 7 Jember ".
